Creative ideas to design effective feedbacks in e-Learning courses

How to use graphics, animations, icons and other graphic ideas to design effective feedbacks to quizzes ad to results pages

Anyone studying with a e-Learning course sooner or later will have to pass tests and check the results of their studies. Very often, however, the results are shown in a very dull, ineffective and not addicting way.

How to improve this important phase of online training and turn it into a relevant and memorable step of the training process? It's easy, with graphic quality!

From the blog of Articulate, we've selected an interesting report paper giving us 13 creative ideas we can use and customize for our e-Learning quizzes, thus becoming useful examples for our next training course.

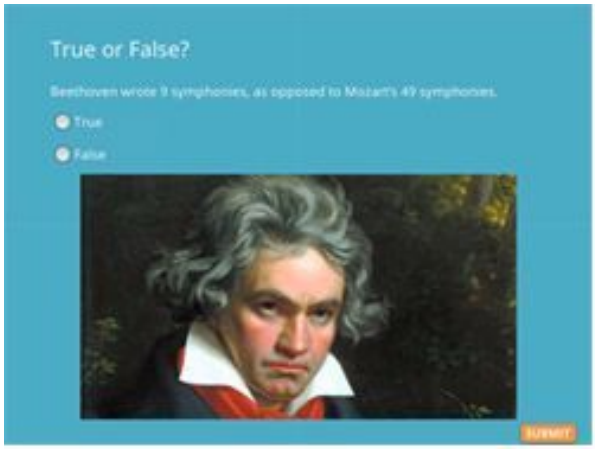

Some visual examples are shown hereunder. If you want to see all 13 projects of feedback pages, please visit this link.

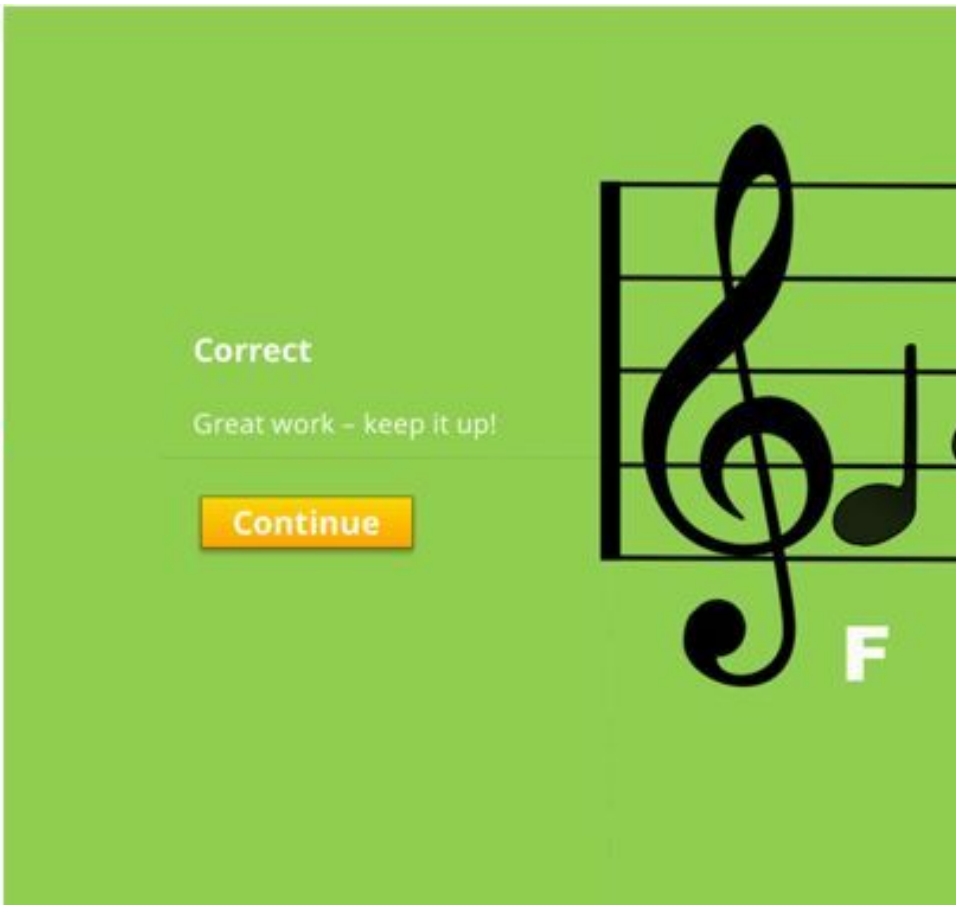

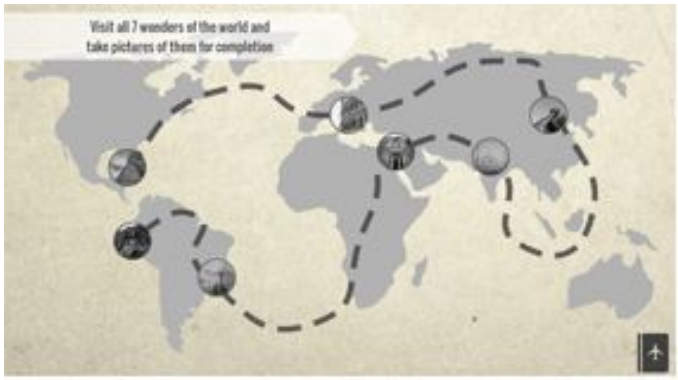

WELL DONE!
Now check out the reasons why below:
1
FRUIT
Picking and eating the fruit is a top priority. If this is not done soon, it will go rotten or be eaten by other creatures and an important source of nutrition will be lost for this year.
2
HONEY
Ideally our hunter-gatherer should save the honey for the long winter months ahead. Unfortunately if he leaves it here, other creatures will consume it. As he evolves, our hunter-gatherer will learn to collect it and store it.
3
TREE BEAR
The tree bear could provide a valuable source of winter meat but our hunter-gatherer will need to find out as much he can about them and where they hibernate, so as to ensure a continuous supply of food for his family.
4
RABBIT
Hunting rabbits requires great physical effort for a small nutritional return. Our hunter-gatherer needs to get smart and learn how to lay traps so as to catch them without wasting too much precious energy.
